Persuasive Essay Writing Tips & Sample: 2022

A persuasive essay is one of the many forms of essay in which the author develops an argument or opinion about the topic, then the writer throughout the essay tries to persuade readers to come to terms or agree with his or her point of view "essay writer". The argument that the writer makes shall be based on facts and presented in the form of a thesis statement. This statement is given at the end of the introduction. The thesis statement is the main highlight of an essay and conveys to the audience exactly the stance of the writer on the topic. hence it should be clear, precise, assertive, and correctly written.

The content given in the persuasive essay shall all support the thesis statement, also, the pieces of evidence provided must be enough to support the content and must come from reliable and authentic resources. A good paper writing service not only gives attention to information shared but also to the fact that the resources used are the authentic ones. This article will help students who opt to get others' help to write my essay to get to know the various facts about death punishment. However, before writing on the topic one must know what are the justifications given to support the case of the death penalty, only then an argument that can oppose or support the justifications can be developed.

The persuasive essay on whether the death penalty should be abolished as share below will focus on how the death penalty is not the solution for the biggest of the crimes. The argument developed would be in favor of abolishment. However, if the essay writer decides to write in favor of the death penalty then he or she must look for authentic information from reliable sources that prove all justifications in favor of the death penalty are right.

The death penalty is the sentence to death or execution given to an individual as a result of a capital prime. The punishment of the death penalty has existed forever. Every society and civilization has had its ideas and practices of the death penalty. The debate on whether the death penalty is justified or not, however, has come to the surface in the previous century only. Generally, the justification given to support the death penalty is that it deters crime, or death shall be returned with death as the eye is for the eye. Although the supporters of the death penalty provide various justifications for the punishment, however, none of these justifications have proved to be true through the course of history. Hence, the reality is The death penalty does not deter crime, is an extreme action and is based on human judgment of crime hence it should be abolished.

The death penalty does not deter crime rat at all. In fact, various countries where it is still practiced have higher crime rates than others that do not practice the death penalty. For instance, in 2004 6 people per 100000 were killed in the states of the USA practicing the death penalty for killing. On the other hand, in the states with no death penalty in practice, the rate of murder was 4 per 100000. Similarly, Canada ended the death penalty once and for all in the year 2003. Since then their crime rate has been reduced by 44 percent. This is because they have used other ways to reduce crime instead of the death penalty. For instance a better police system, improved economy, more employment opportunities, etc.

The death penalty does not provide closure to victims' families. According to the research, the death penalty does not provide closure to victims' families. Instead, it slows down the healing process of the families of victims "essay writing service". It keeps on interfering with their healing and keeps on reminding them of the horrendous crime. Consider the case of a woman who lost her husband and father to separate murders in the city of Wyoming. She said that she repealed the death penalty because she would have been mentally devastated if she kept on going to court for hearings.

The punishment of executing the offender is an extreme action and can not be reversed. These sentences are given based on the judgments made by judges who are human beings. Human beings are prone to make errors. Many innocents lives have been lost to the death penalty as a consequence of wrongful convictions. Cameron Todd Willingham, who got famous for being wrongly executed in Texas in 2004 is an example of this wrong conviction-based killing. His innocence was revealed much after he was executed. The procedures most of the time used for killing the offender are also very inhumane. For instance, lethal injections take 30 minutes for a person to die. These 30 minutes are of extreme and unbearable pain. These and many other stats revealed in recent times make the death penalty unjustified at any cost "paper writing service". These and more related facts can help students build a notion of the death penalty instead of opting to write my paper for me and can make tasks of writing on the death penalty simpler for them.